

Kaelyn and DJ's Magical Adventures: Their Foggy Day Adventure

By Justin Sato

On a very foggy morning in San Francisco, Kaelyn and DJ stared out the window. "We can't see anything!" DJ sighed. "It's too foggy to play outside." Their little all black dog, Suki, whimpered, just as bored as they were.

Their mom, Macie, came in with two cups of hot chocolate. "I know what will cheer you up," she said. "Did you know our fog has a name? People call him Karl. And on days like this, Karl the Fog loves to play hide-and-seek with the city."

A mission! Kaelyn and DJ looked at each other with excited smiles. "Let's go find what Karl is hiding!" Kaelyn said. She shook her head, and the beads in her two puffs of hair began to hum with a gentle, glowing magic.

DJ wiggled his bottom and let out a tiny, squeaky toot. A little cloud of rainbow-colored "power gas" shimmered behind him. "Let's go!" he shouted. Suki barked and wagged her tail, ready for an adventure.

Zing! The magic in Kaelyn's beads lifted her into the air! She zipped out the door and straight into the thick, gray fog. "It's like flying through a big, soft cloud!" she called back.

"I'll check the streets!" DJ shouted. PFFFT! A puff of power gas launched him down the sidewalk. The fog was so thick he could barely see his own feet! Suki's little legs scrambled to keep up, staying close to DJ's colorful gas trail.

From high up, Kaelyn couldn't see anything but gray. She felt a little lost. "What would Peepaw do?" she wondered. She remembered him telling her, "If you're ever lost, little star, just shine your own light. It will help others find you, and help you find your way."

Just then, she heard a shout from below. It was DJ! PFFFFT! He had let out a big puff of power gas, pushing the fog away in a perfect circle. For a moment, he could see the bottom of a giant, red tower. "I found something!" he yelled.

Hearing DJ's shout and remembering Peepaw's words, Kaelyn had an idea. She made all her beads glow as brightly as they could. They shone like a little sun in the fog. "Follow my light!" she called. The light cut through the mist, showing the very top of the red tower poking through the clouds.

Working together, they found everything! They found Coit Tower looking like a ghost and the Painted Ladies houses wearing foggy hats. The fog wasn't boring at all; it was the best hiding place for a city-wide game of hide-and-seek.

They raced home, laughing, with Suki barking at their heels. "Mom, we found everything Karl was hiding!" DJ shouted as he ran through the door.

Macie smiled and wrapped them in a giant hug. "You're my amazing fog explorers!" she said. Kaelyn and DJ knew that even the foggiest day could be a magical adventure when they worked together.