

Kaelyn and DJ's Magical
Adventures: The Case of the Runaway Scarf

By Justin Sato

In a sunny house in San Francisco, Kaelyn and DJ were building a tall tower of blocks with their scruffy, black dog, Suki. Just then, their mom, Macie, came into the room looking sad. "Oh, my little adventurers," she sighed. "My favorite cozy scarf, the one Peepaw gave me, has flown right out the window! Can you get it back?"

A mission! Kaelyn and DJ looked at each other with determined smiles. Kaelyn shook her head, and the beads in her two puffs of hair began to hum with a gentle, glowing magic. DJ wiggled his bottom and let out a tiny, squeaky toot. A little cloud of rainbow-colored "power gas" shimmered behind him.

Zing! The magic in Kaelyn's beads lifted her into the air! She zipped out the open window and hovered above the street. "I'll look from up high!" she called. Suki barked from the window, wagging her tail.

"I'll check the streets!" DJ shouted. PFFFT! A puff of power gas launched him down the sidewalk. He was a speedy blur, racing past the famous Painted Ladies houses. Suki's little legs scrambled to keep up on the sidewalk below.

Kaelyn soared over the city, her eyes scanning everything below. She saw Lombard Street, the crookedest street in the world, wiggling like a snake. "I see it!" she suddenly shouted. "It's flying toward Coit Tower!"

DJ heard Kaelyn's call. He changed direction with a swoosh of power gas and zoomed up Telegraph Hill. He and Suki arrived at the bottom of the tall, white Coit Tower just as the scarf snagged on a ledge near the very top.

Kaelyn flew up to the ledge, but the wind was too strong! It pushed her away every time she got close. "I can't grab it!" she called down to DJ. The scarf flapped wildly, about to fly away again.

DJ looked at the tall tower. It was too high to run up. He and Kaelyn looked at each other, worried. What could they do? They both closed their eyes and thought the same thing: "What would Peepaw do?"

An idea popped into their heads! Peepaw loved to go fishing. Kaelyn took off one of her magic hair beads and DJ pulled a long, strong piece of grass from the lawn. They imagined Peepaw casting his fishing line.

Kaelyn tied the grass to her bead. It glowed and stretched, becoming a long, magical fishing line! She hovered near the tower, aimed carefully, and cast the line. The bead hooked the scarf perfectly! She gently reeled it in.

Down below, DJ and Suki cheered! Kaelyn flew down and handed the cozy scarf to DJ. "We did it!" they shouted together. Their mission was a success! They couldn't wait to race home and give the scarf back to Mom.

Back at home, Macie wrapped the scarf around her neck and gave them both a giant hug. "You're my heroes," she said, smiling. Kaelyn and DJ knew that with their powers and a little help from Peepaw's memory, they could solve any problem.